ABSTRACT

The primary purpose of this internship is to develop web application development using PHP with WordPress system. There are currently several programming languages used in today's world to develop a web-based software or software. Several of them are only used for the front-end and back-end design of the software. For example, HTML5, CSS3, and Bootstrap Framework are currently available in a variety of other programming languages that are used to develop dynamic functions of software or applications. For example - PHP, OOP, PHP, JavaScript, JQuery, Ajax etc. Nowadays there are also a few frameworks that are widely used. Frameworks are basically structured programming using concept plugins, addons and models. WordPress will also be called CMS. If we create a web-based e-commerce software that can access it from anywhere in the world is really effective for us. This is why I choose the subject of my speech "web software development using PHP with WordPress in Cmt International Ltd". Working in "Cmt International Ltd" Adding huge activity to my upcoming career was another important factor in solving real life problems. All the details of web description software development go into this statement along with the e-commerce knowledge and experience we have gathered during this internship.

2.3 Target Group & Audience

It really is straightforward to get caught up with Web Program. Designers can obtain embroiled trying in order to impress their customers with fancy brand new techniques, while customers desire a fantastic website to display off their company. Together, if they will are not cautious, they can obtain so caught upward in pallettes, fonts, images, visual components, etc. they overlook the most significant thing that will is the user-friendliness from the website.

Since as the client might end up along with a stunning, advanced site, it is usually of important small use if this does not attract those who are usually actually likely to make use of it, and as a result, does not deliver any kind of tangible benefits in order to the business. This is our work, as designers, to make sure our clients concentrate on the ending users, and that will we create a web site that will improve its users" encounter and be the perfect fit regarding the intended viewers. Because ultimately, internet application is simply actually as good since its audience considers.

5.3 Challenges

This new generation of software-enabled services and products must be packaged and reflect a new level of value. The new value equation is based on product / service connectivity, data analysis and intelligence. Software programs should also take into account new product equations to respond to a growing strong market. Product packaging and prices need to change rapidly.

Each company faces challenges when they work to match up their client‟s software development expectations. Whether it‟s planning strategies to clear initial software development needs or its product delivery phase, software developers have various complications if they won‟t be able to develop adequate software as the client‟s demands. In most of the case, lack of communication is the biggest reason behind pains and challenges face by a software development company, doesn‟t matter whether it‟s from client‟s end or developer‟s end.[1]

But, I will always appreciate “Cmt International Ltd”, the custom software development company to which I assign my work. They arrange technical meetings with their developers in order to develop my software exactly I want.
